The Sandhills and Pier. The rockless and stoneless sands of Southport are greatly beloved and frequented by children, and from one of the points where they delight to congregate is to be seen the pier, a handsome structure 1,461 yards long, erected at a cost of £20,000. A tramway runs down its centre, and shelters, seats, refreshment rooms, and a bandstand have been erected, also a handsome pavilion that can accommodate 1,500 persons.
